MATTHEW 21:28-32

In the Gospel from Matthew, the chief priests and the elders of the people were demanding to know Jesus' authority for His actions and words. In His response, Jesus asked their opinion on the behaviour of two young men? The first says no but subsequently complies with his father's request to go and work in the vineyard. The second says yes to his father but does nothing. The two sons represent, respectively, one: the religious outcasts: the tax collectors and prostitutes and two: the religious leaders. The response of the chief priests and elders condemned them. Their response was that the first son completed the will of the father in obedience and not the second. Jesus pointed-out to them that they were like the son that gave the good words but was disobedient to his father. They held positions of religious authority and were full of good words. They were also called to work in the vineyard of the Lord. They had, however, rejected the call by John the Baptist for repentance and turned their backs on the Kingdom of God by rejecting the authority and message of Jesus. They had committed the worst possible sin that of refusing to do God's will. In contrast, many outcasts including tax collectors and prostitutes had listened to John the Baptist with sincere repentance. The outcasts had welcomed the coming of the Kingdom of God in Jesus Christ. They had the humility to acknowledge their faults. What does this message mean to us today? Quite simply we must know the will of God and act upon it in our lives. How do we know God's will? We know God's will in our lives through reading Holy Scripture, receiving the Sacraments, and spending time listening to God in prayer. Once we know God's will in our lives, we must have the grace and strength of character to act upon it. We receive the grace and strength to do God's will through the reception of God Himself, in the Holy Eucharist: the body and blood of Our Lord Jesus Christ.
